

How Can We Build An Industry If Only The Unemployed Can Buy Our Products?

As we expected at Cal NORML, one of the most frequently asked questions we have been getting since Prop. 64 legalized adult marijuana use in California is, "Am I now protected against drug testing on my job?"

Sadly, the answer is no. Prop. 64 allows employers to discriminate against their workers, even when their marijuana use is during non-working hours. In California, even medical marijuana patients are not protected against employment discrimination.

Ten states (Arizona, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Maine, Minnesota, Nevada, New York, Pennsylvania and Rhode Island) have made it illegal for an employer to not hire or to discriminate against either a job applicant or employee who uses medical marijuana, under certain conditions. But not California.

Cal NORML is making it a priority to advance legislation protecting workers' rights in California. With the wind at our backs riding the voters' mandate on legalization with Prop. 64, the time to act is now.

Over 80% of Fortune 500 companies require drug and alcohol testing of their employees. Employment drug testing has been shown in federal studies not to improve worker safety, but it's a great way to discriminate against cannabis consumers. Impairment testing is a better and more just alternative for improving workplace safety.

We need the cannabis industry's support in this campaign. Think of it as an investment in the future, as well as an important human rights issue. Let's end unwarranted employment drug testing now, and allow our cannabis industry to flourish.

YES! I will help California NORML fight for the employment rights of cannabis consumers.
